

IADT is very concerned by the conflict that is currently affecting Ukraine, as well as in other locations across the world affected by war, armed conflict or natural disasters. The human suffering caused by political upheaval, destruction of homes, schools and hospitals, and the general disregard for human life is deplorable. The disruption to individuals and families displaced as a result is hard to comprehend. IADT encourages all members to provide any humanitarian support to individuals affected by conflicts in all areas of the world. Any individual actions, however small, will help to alleviate suffering for these vulnerable people. We encourage you to act now and not wait for others.
