Amalienborg is considered one of the greatest works of Danish Rococo architecture and was constructed in the 1700’s.
It is made up of four identical buildings - The Christian VII’s Palace is also known as Moltke’s Palace, The Christian VIII’s Palace is also known as Levitzau’s Palace, The Frederik VIII’s Palace is also known as Brockdorff’s Palace and The Christian IX’s Palace or Schack’s Palace – spread around the octagonal courtyard.
This is the main residence of Her Majesty the Queen. When the flag is raised, it signals that the Queen is present.

Open to the Public
Today audiences can visit two of the four palaces: Christian VIII’s palace, which is partially organized as a museum for the Glücksburg royal family and Christian VII’s palace, which is used by the Queen for receiving guests and official representatives.

In the centre of the courtyard there is an equestrian statue of King Frederik V and it is considered one of the most outstanding equestrian statues in the world. The statue was unveiled in 1771 - five years after King Frederik V’s death in 1766.

The Royal Guard
Amalienborg is also known for the Danish Royal Guard, who patrol the palace grounds.

The Danish Royal Guard march from Rosenborg Castle at 11:30 daily through the streets of Copenhagen, and execute the changing of the guard in front of Amalienborg Palace at 12:00.
When the Queen is in residence the guard is accompanied by the Royal Guards music band.

Christiansborg Palace. Located on the tiny island of Slotsholmen, contains the Danish Parliament Folketinget, the Supreme Court, and the Ministry of State. Parts of the palace are used by the Royal Family for various functions and events. The Royal Reception Rooms include The Tower Room and The Oval Throne Room where foreign ambassadors to Denmark are received by the Queen. The Throne Room gives access to the balcony where the Danish monarchs are proclaimed.

Unique Tapestries
The Great Hall is the most imposing room in the palace. This is where you will find the Queen’s tapestries.

The Danish business community marked the occasion of Her Majesty Queen Margrethe II’s 50th birthday in 1990 by ordering a gift of 11 tapestries. Bjørn Nørgaard painted the full-size sketches upon which the tapestries were woven. The tapestry series depicts 1000 years of Danish history.

The Prime Minister of Denmark also uses The Royal Reception Rooms in connection with state visits by foreign state leaders. The Alexandra Hall is used for official dinners.

If you hold a ticket to the Royal Reception Rooms, you are entitled to a free guided tour of the premises.

Rosenborg Castle in Copenhagen is home to some of Denmark’s greatest cultural treasures. The castle was built in 1606-1634 by Christian IV as a pleasure castle. In the basement you will find the Danish crown jewels and regalia.

Rosenborg Castle was inhabited by the royal family until 1720. Each king has created his chambers after changing fashion.

Since 1838, the castle with all its contents has acted as a historical museum, called the Royal Danish Collections. The museum has a sister museum at Amalienborg Palace, called Amalienborg Museum.

Among the main attractions of Rosenborg are the Great Hall with the coronation throne, which is guarded by three lions of silver, and the three treasuries with the crowns and the crown jewels.

In the Great Hall you will find the famous Rosenborg tapestries, which have hung here since 1693. They show King Christian V’s victories in the Scanian War 1675-1679.

Portraits of Caroline Mathilde and Struensee
At Rosenborg Castle you can see portraits of Johan Friedrich Struensee and Queen Caroline Mathilde. Caroline Mathilde was married to the insane King Christian 7, but had a fatal love affair with the king’s physician Johan Friedrich Struensee.

While King Christian 7 was too ill to govern, Struensee led the country for almost two years. He was arrested and executed in 1772, after which Caroline Mathilde was exiled to northern Germany.

The portrait of Struensee is from 1824 by Hans Hansen and is a copy of a painting from the hand of painter Jens Juel. The portrait of Queen Caroline Mathilde is from 1771 and painted by Jens Juel.

17th century tower and observatory

Rundetaarn, or the round tower, is the oldest functioning observatory in Europe and stars have been watched here since 1642.

King Christian IV and astronomer Tycho Brahe

At the time when Christian IV built the tower, Denmark was quite famous for its astronomical achievements thanks to the astronomer Tycho Brahe. When he died in 1601, the King wished to continue Brahe’s research, and thus the round tower came into being.

It is now a while since the scientists left the telescope, but the observatory is still frequently used by amateur astronomers and the many visitors of the tower.

The fascinating spiral walk

The observatory is encircled by an outdoor platform from which you have a magnificent view of the old part of Copenhagen. To get there you need to walk up the spiral walk, which is 268.5 meters long at the outer wall and only 85.5 meters long close to the core of the building. This means that you usually walk around 209 meters to get to top although the tower is only 36 meters tall.

This wily walk also leads to the library hall, which once housed the entire book collection of the university. Today the hall serves as the framework for changing exhibitions of art, culture, history and science.

The entrance

The entry way of the tower is flanked by ornamental writing in latin and the entire entrance area is actually a little bit crooked as it was originally built into the church wall, which was in line with the street. On the top platform several different buildings have been raised through times gone by.

Kronborg Castle in Elsinore, north of Copenhagen, is one of northern Europe’s finest Renaissance castles. It is located at the entrance to Oresund and was built in 1574-1585.

Kronborg Castle is probably the most famous Danish castle, known worldwide from Shakespeare’s Hamlet. Hamlet’s spirit is still roaming the hallways of Kronborg, and every summer you can experience Hamlet Scenen perform Hamlet on an open air stage in the courtyard.

Frederik 2’s Kronborg is at once an elegant castle and a monumental military fortress surrounded by considerable fortifications with bastions and ravelins. It has not been inhabited by the royal family since the late 1600’s.

The castle houses collections of Renaissance and Baroque interiors, and among the main attractions is the 62-metre ballroom, the very well-preserved chapel and the mythological statue of Holger Danske in Kasematterne below the castle.

Queen Caroline Mathilde under house arrest

In 1772 Kronborg Castle played a minor role in the fatal drama between the insane King Christian 7, his wife Queen Caroline Mathilde and her secret lover Johan Friedrich Struensee.

After the arrest of Struensee in Copenhagen 17 January 1772, Caroline Mathilde was taken to Kronborg Castle, where she was under house arrest for a period of time. Her fate was long uncertain.

She was accused of infidelity, and although her defender Peter Uldall did what he could, she was convicted, divorced from the king and banished to the town of Celle in northern Germany. She never saw her children again and died a few years later of an epidemic.

From 1785-1923 Kronborg Castle was inhabited by the Danish military. The castle was added to UNESCO’s World Heritage List in 2000.

The Karen Blixen Museum is located directly by the Øresund Sound in Rungstedlund, an enchanting park and bird sanctuary north of Copenhagen.

Karen Blixen (1885-1962), considered one of Denmark’s most significant 20th century writers, was born in Rungstedlund, where she lived most of her life before and after her years in Africa.

Out of Africa

From 1914 to 1931, Karen Blixen ran a coffee plantation in the outskirts of Nairobi, Kenya. Among her best known literary works are the novel Out of Africa, describing this important period of her life, and the short story Babette’s Feast, both of which were turned into Oscar-winning films.

The Museum

The museum occupies the rooms where Karen Blixen lived, and it also houses a gallery featuring Karen Blixen’s drawings and paintings, a documentary exhibit on her life and work, a library, a film screening room, a café, a museum shop, and an auditorium used for lectures and special exhibitions.

Tivoli is a must for all children and those who like to play. Tivoli is located just a few minutes walk from City Hall, and with the Copenhagen Central Station as its nearest neighbor it is very easy to get to. In spring 2013 Tivoli will present a 600 m² expansion of the garden including three new rides. Tivoli is the world’s second oldest amusement park and is one of Copenhagen’s most famous attractions. Tivoli is filled with wild rides, green oases, gourmet food, and rock concerts - and much more. The old amusement park is from 1843 and is a garden full of tradition. At Tivoli there is something for everyone. The garden is not only full with rides and adventures, but can also offer a calm and relaxed atmosphere. Here you will find green areas, lakes, fountains and beautiful flowers. Tivoli has three outdoor scenes, with lots of live music - both Danish and international artists. Every Friday throughout the summer season there is Friday Rock at the lawn. In Tivoli you can also experience the Tivoli Gardens parade through the park or watch a performance in the Pantomime theatre. Petzi walks around the garden every day to greet children of all ages.

Autumn and Christmas
Every year at the autumn holiday Tivoli is transformed into an enchanted autumn universe full of witches, pumpkins and lanterns. All rides are running as they do from the middle of November and throughout December, where Christmas in Tivoli opens its doors.

Fireworks
Fireworks is an old tradition in Tivoli. On special occasions, such as the opening and closing of the Summer season and on Tivoli’s birthday on August 15th you can experience the beautiful fireworks. There are also fireworks on selected days during the summer season. Between Christmas and New Year there is the Tivoli fireworks festival with fireworks everyday.

Tivoli is expanding
In spring 2013 Tivoli will open its doors and present the garden’s 600 m² expansion. The extra square meters offers you three new rides in a Tycho Brahe themed area. The wildest new ride lets you climb on board on the giant eagles and experience the world upside down at breakneck speed. The second new ride is not quite as wild. It is a 8 meter tall rotating “drop tower”. The third and last new ride is a redesigned and interactive version of the classic Tivoli ride “Little Pilot”.

During summer, Nyhavn is the perfect place to enjoy a spot of al fresco dining. Or, if you prefer, you can do like the locals and buy a beer from a nearby store and rest your feet at the quayside.

Den Nye Havn, ‘the New Haven’, was originally a busy commercial port where ships from all over the world would dock. The area teemed with sailors, ladies of pleasure, pubs and alehouses. ‘Den Nye Havn’ eventually changed its name to ‘Nyhavn’ (‘Newhaven’), and gradually the beautiful old slanted houses were renovated and classy restaurants started popping up.

Hans Christian Andersen’s Nyhavn

No. 9, Nyhavn, is the oldest house in the area dating back to 1681. The design of the house has not been altered since that time.

Many of the houses lining the quays of Nyhavn have been the homes of prominent artists.

Hans Christian Andersen used to live at no. 20. This is where he wrote the fairy-tales ‘the Tinder-Box’, ‘Little Claus and Big Claus’, and ‘the Princess and the Pea’. He also lived twenty years at no. 67 and two years at no. 18, Nyhavn.

Canal Tours Copenhagen is a wonderful way of seeing Copenhagen. Many Copenhageners take the tour to get an opportunity to see their capital from a different perspective.

The tours last approximately one hour and guiding is conducted in Danish and English and may also include a third language, such as German, Italian, Spanish or French. On the tour, you will pass the Copenhagen Opera House, Amalienborg Palace, Christiansborg Palace, the impressive Black Diamond library, and, of course, the Little Mermaid.

There are also stops by The Little Mermaid and at Christianshavns Torv.

You can even take this canal trip with a clean conscience. All the Canal Tours Copenhagen’s boats have been adjusted so that they are environmentally friendly.
At Langelinje Pier you will find one of Copenhagen’s most important tourist attractions: The Little Mermaid.

The statue from 1913 was originally a gift to the city donated by brewer Carl Jacobsen. The statue is made of bronze, is 125 cm tall and weighs 175 kg.

The story of the Little Mermaid is from writer Hans Christian Andersen’s fairy tale by the same name, a story about the unhappy mermaid who wish she goes on shore.

Inspired by a ballerina
The statue was inspired by ballerina Ellen Price, who in 1909 danced the lead role in the ballet The Little Mermaid at the Royal Theatre.

According to history Ellen Price, however, would not model in the nude for sculptor Edvard Eriksen. Therefore, only the statue’s face is modeled after the ballerina, while the body is modeled after the sculptor’s wife Eline Eriksen.

The headless mermaid
The little mermaid has several times been the victim of vandalism. Twice she has lost her head, once the arm was sawn off, and several times she has had paint poured on her.

But every time she is rescued and restored, so she can stay in her place by the water and bid travelers welcome to Copenhagen harbor.

The Royal Theatre, Old Stage in Copenhagen has graced the Kongens Nytorv Square since 1748. The Royal Theatre’s has three main venues at its disposal: the Opera House, the Playhouse, and the Old Stage, the latter almost exclusively for ballet performances.

All performances are state-subsidized, making tickets quite affordable compared to theatre tickets elsewhere in Europe.

Should Her Majesty attend a performance, the audience is required by tradition to rise and remain standing until the Queen is comfortably seated.

Tickets are available at the Royal Theatre’s ticket office in Kongens Nytorv Square.

Copenhagen Jazzhouse presents more than 200 concerts a year with the most outstanding contemporary artists and established legends and is a creative powerhouse in Northern Europe when it comes to live concerts. Jazzhouse has, in its long history, always been the ‘it’ jazz scene in Copenhagen, showcasing talented musicians from both near and far. The club’s program, created by Artistic Director Lennart Gimmingan, offers a combination of classic and modern jazz.

You can expect to sit side by side with renowned musicians and artists and after Friday and Saturday concerts the night club remains open until dawn. The hippest DJs and VJs will entertain you and upstairs you will find the intimate cocktail bar HERLUF.

The Copenhagen Opera House is a donation from the A.P. Møller and Chastine McKinney Møller Foundation to the Danish people. It totals 41,000 square metres. Five of the fourteen storeys are subterranean. The main stage of the opera seats an audience of 1400.

The Opera House is clad with southern German Jura Gelb limestone, and the foyer features Sicilian Perlatino marble. The wall of the auditorium facing the foyer is clad with maple wood, and the ceiling in the main auditorium is adorned with 105,000 sheets of 24 carat gold leaf, equivalent to 1.5 kilos of gold.

The Copenhagen Opera House is designed by Danish architect Henning Larsen, and a number of Danish artists have contributed to the decor, among them Per Kirkeby who has created four bronze reliefs, and Danish-Icelandic artist Olafur Eliasson who has contributed the three light sculptures for the foyer.

Tivoli’s Summer season also includes the traditional Friday Rock with Danish and international stars on the open air stage Plænen. The concerts are free once you have paid the entrance to Tivoli.

International artists and local musicians guest Tivoli Gardens from mid April to late September. Whether you are into rock, soft R&B or pop, you will find it at one of this year’s Friday Rock concerts some of which are double concerts.

Friday Rock has evolved into a popular Copenhagen event and quite a tradition for many Copenhagener. Today it brings together up to half a million people every Summer.

The concerts begin at 22:00. Be sure to arrive early as it gets crowded. Once you have paid the entrance fee, the concerts are free.
Copenhagen’s largest shopping area is centered around Strøget in the heart of the city.

Strøget is one of Europe’s longest pedestrian streets with a wealth of shops, from budget-friendly chains to some of the world’s most expensive brands. The stretch is 1.1 kilometers long and runs from City Hall Square (Rådhuspladsen) to Kongens Nytorv.

Strøget is a nickname from the 1800s and covers the streets Frederiksberggade, Nygade, Vimmelskaftet and Østergade and Nytorv square, Gammeltorv Square and Amagertorv Square.

The stretch was originally called Routen, and it was not before 1962 and in the years after it was converted to a pedestrian street.

Shopping and sights...
Strøget is most famous for shopping. Big international brands like Prada, Max Mara, Louis Vuitton, Cerutti, Mulberry, Chanel, Marlboro, Karen Millen, Hermès and Boss are represented at the end of the street facing up to Kongens Nytorv.

If your budget is more limited, you can continue along Strøget down towards City Hall Square, where you find shops like Hennes and Mauritz, Vero Moda, Bik Bok, Only, Vila, and Bianco shoes. However, Strøget is not just shopping. Look up and down the side streets during your shopping spree, and you will see several of Copenhagen’s beautiful sights and attractions, such as Helligåndskirken, often with a book sale outside, Church of Our Lady (Vor Frue Kirke), where Crown Prince Frederik and Crown Princess Mary were married, behind Gammeltorv Square, the court house at Nytorv Square, the Stork Fountain (Storkspringvandet) at Amagertorv Square and Nikolaj Church nearby.

From Amagertorv you can also see across the canal to Christiansborg Palace, where parliament sits. And do not forget City Hall Square (Rådhuspladsen) with Copenhagen City Hall Tower - and beautiful Kongens Nytorv Square with The Royal Danish Theatre and Nyhavn in the other end of Strøget.

And street performers
Strøget is a popular hangout for the city’s buskers and street performers. Especially at Amagertorv Square you can often see performances by acrobats, magicians and musicians.

In the end of the street adjacent to City Hall Square you should be wary of con artists who make money on games in which they ask passers-by to guess the whereabouts of a ball under one of three cups.

More than 60 shops around the world bear the inconspicuous Danish name Georg Jensen. Georg Jensen himself (1866 - 1935), his co-workers and successors, have created jewellery and flatware so fantastic that they have become synonymous with Danish silver.

At the main shop in Amagertorv, on the Pedestrian Mall, one finds Georg Jensen brooches, earrings, necklaces, pendants, and rings. Silver flatware of the company’s own design is also available.

When Georg Jensen died, The Times wrote in its obituary that his work will be the antiques of the future. This prediction has since proven true.

Georg Jensen is purveyor to the royal Danish court.

Royal Copenhagen was originally named The Royal Porcelain Factory and was founded in 1775. In all the years they have produced products with deep respect for the history and traditions of craftsmanship, but never without renewal.

You will find Royal Copenhagen’s Flagship Store on Amagertorv on the main shopping street Strøget in the heart of Copenhagen. The beautiful three-storey Renaissance house dates back to 1616 and is one of Copenhagen’s oldest houses. Royal Copenhagen has been present here since 1911.

The shop displays the entire Royal Copenhagen’s exclusive range of classic as well as modern hand-painted porcelain service, figurines and gift items in an inspiring environment, which also includes the acclaimed The Royal Café, which serves traditional Danish food with a new and modern twist.

Purveyor to the royal Danish court
Royal Copenhagen is purveyor to the royal Danish court and has always had a close relationship with the royal Danish family. Dowager Queen Juliane Marie, stepmother to the insane King Christian seventh, eagerly supported the newly established Royal Porcelain Factory in 1775, and in 1781 they created a porcelain bust of her. She also had her own dinnerware called Juliane Marie.

We can thank King Christian 7, who was schizophrenic and married to Queen Caroline Mathilde (who had an affair with their physician Johan Friedrich Struensee), for Royal Copenhagen’s most famous dinnerware ever: Flora Danica.

Flora Danica was created in 1790-1803 and is decorated with drawings of Denmark’s flora. Christian 7 ordered it in production as a gift to Catherine the Great of Russia, who died before the set was finished.

The Royal Porcelain Factury was run by the royal Danish court until 1868.

At the Danish Design Center you find the latest in Danish and international design.

The Danish Design Center exhibits a world of design and offers funny, innovative and surprising examples of how designers can make a difference for all of us by solving minor and major problems.

The Danish Design Centre’s shop with interiors, books and accessories is a small exhibition in itself, and in the café open-faced sandwiches, design furniture and sustainability form a synthesis.

The Danish Design Centre in Copenhagen, or simply DDC, was inaugurated at the turn of the millennium. Architect Henning Larsen has designed the building with its beautiful glass facade opening onto the broad H.C. Andersens Boulevard.

The DDC Shop, located on the ground floor, offers a wide array of untraditional design products, including the compact ‘Travel Light’ items designed to enhance your comfort when travelling.

How about a folding picnic basket, or a pop-up reading lamp attachable, by the touch of a button, to your favourite travelling literature. You might even consider getting the ‘Brompton collapsible bike’ weighing only 12 kilos.

Besides these Travel Light products, the DDC Shop offers a wide selection of Scandinavian designs, including a miniature model of the classic ‘Syveren’ chair by Arne Jacobsen, or Kay Bojesen’s toy monkey, crafted in teak.
